High court voids San Fo gay unions

San Francisco, Calif. (AP) — A federal judge has voided the city's ordinance that recognizes gay unions as legal entities. The judge's decision, which was announced Tuesday, comes after a long legal battle between the city and the federal government. The ordinance, which was passed in 1996, allows gay couples to register as domestic partners and enjoy the same legal benefits as married couples. The federal government, however, has argued that the ordinance violates the federal Constitution's equal protection clause. The judge's decision is a significant victory for the city and its gay community. It means that gay couples in San Francisco can now enjoy the same legal benefits as married couples. The decision also sets a precedent for other cities that have similar ordinances. The city's mayor, Willie Brown, said that he was "proud" of the decision and that it was a "great day for the city." He also said that he hoped that the decision would encourage other cities to pass similar ordinances. The federal government, on the other hand, has said that it will appeal the decision. It argues that the ordinance is unconstitutional and that it should be struck down. The case is expected to go to the Supreme Court, where it will be decided whether or not the ordinance is constitutional. The decision is a major win for the gay community in San Francisco and a landmark case in the fight for gay rights.

The secret shame

Quiet attempts at good governance

As remote as the ice age

THE POLITICAL system governing the world today is as remote as the ice age. It is a system of power and control that has been built up over the years, and it is a system that is now in a state of crisis. The system is based on a few key principles: power, control, and the ability to manipulate the masses. It is a system that has been built up over the years, and it is a system that is now in a state of crisis.

Victims of child sexual abuse are often in a state of shock and confusion. They may feel embarrassed, ashamed, and guilty. They may also feel that they are not being taken seriously. It is important for victims to seek help from a professional counselor or therapist. They should also talk to a trusted friend or family member. The National Child Abuse Hotline (1-800-4-A-CHILD) is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. For more information, visit www.ncha.org.

I reported this study as done in three parts, with the first part being the first study, the second part being the second study, and the third part being the third study.

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, low-impact aerobically and resistance training program on the cardiovascular and muscular fitness of sedentary, middle-aged women. The program consisted of 3 sessions per week, each lasting 30 min. The program included a variety of aerobic and resistance exercises. The results of the study showed that the program had a significant positive effect on the cardiovascular and muscular fitness of the women. The program also had a significant positive effect on the women's self-reported health status. The program was well tolerated by the women and was associated with a significant improvement in their quality of life.

THE PERKIEST smile nudges you to attention every weekend while you watch the cartoons (do not deny it; we're all still children at heart). It shakes off your hangover and wipes away the sleep from your eyes. Like a stroke of disorder, this girl-next-door has won you with insouciant charm.

Suddenly, you start reminiscing about those good old days when life was all about maple syrup pancakes, fairy tale story books, and Mickey Mouse! Who is this bright muse?

I will let you into the secret world of Nikki Muller, my greatest friend. She is a half-Pinoy, half-Swiss beauty who has been a pillar for me this past year. I have known her ever since she rattled into our first-period history class some five years ago, fresh from an all-girls convent school in London. We became instant buddies.

Our friendship grew fast. After our high school graduation last school year, we took a break while all the rest of our classmates and friends moved abroad for further study. It was tough not knowing where we were in life, neither kids nor adults, stuck between steps one and two, utterly confused and questioning our upshots.

We had only each other to hold on to. This was even more troublesome since we were, and still are, so not alike. Nikki loves frankfurters, I love veggies; she adores opera, I adore rock; she has a fear of creatures, I love squeezing any little animal; she hates gardening, I enjoy it; she wears dark nail polish, I wear pink.

Our friendship is an electrifying one, kindled by the attraction of opposite poles. It turned out, this contradiction was just what we needed. We haven't had a fight; we haven't even argued. Hating only each other hasn't only made our hairs stand with kinetic energy; it has made us shockproof.

Like they say, the stronger the winds, the tougher the tree. This "typhoon" year has made our friendship more of a partnership. Nikki has balanced my life, bringing reason, depth and meaning to it. We talk for hours on end about romantic ideals, religion, art and relationships. We analyze our shortcomings and appreciate all that has been given to us.

I am now more at ease about the otherwise big black future, thanks to Nikki. She has been a shoulder to cry on, the singular push that has made me strive for the better. And you know what? I don't need anyone else.

At first glance she is little more than a perky Disney girl. But then her sunshiny smile gives us a sneak peak into her in-tuitive persona. It is what shakes us up when we turn on the TV and see her pearly whites beaming.

Who is this new-found friend? Who is Nikki Muller? My partner, my pillar, my friend.
